

Attend Your Zone Meeting This Year!

Zone meetings bring together students from SPS chapters within your region's zone. They facilitate connections and help build community with nearby students in physics and astronomy.

These student-led meetings are an engaging and effective way for undergraduates to grow their professional and career skills, such as presenting research, learning about the landscape of scientific research, and interacting with scientists and peers. Zone meetings are also critical for the overall health of the Society of Physics Students as they keep our community connected, thriving, and strong.

To find out when and where your zone meeting will take place, connect with your Zone Councilors and Associate Zone Councilors at www.spsnational.org/about/governance/national-council, or check out our event calendar at www.spsnational.org/calendar.

For more information about zone meetings, or resources for chapters interested in hosting one, visit www.spsnational.org/meetings/zone-meetings.

